

Speakers

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS address current trends and challenges in student affairs and services in Europe. GLOBAL EXPERTS give input and reflect on the social dimension of higher education.

COUNTRY & CASE STUDIES present the state-of-the-art of student affairs all across the European higher education area.

Who should attend?

- Student affairs and services leaders and staff
- Academics and university staff
- Exchange organizations in higher education
- Public authorities in higher education
- All those interested in the social dimension of higher education

When and where

July 11-13, 2011

dbb forum berlin
Friedrichstraße 169/170
D-10117 Berlin
Germany

Program and registration:
www.student-affairs.eu

Conference Partners

Deutsches Studentenwerk – German National Association for Student Affairs

European Council for Student Affairs

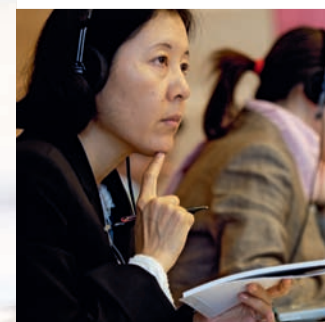

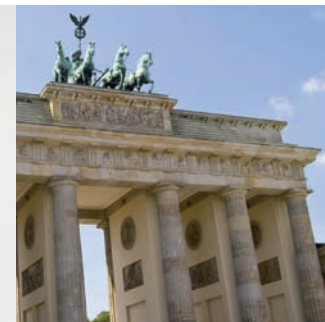

Federal Ministry of Education and Research

SPONSORED BY THE

Picture credits:
Kay Herschelmann and iStockphoto.com/claire-noelle (Brandenburg Gate)

January 2011

International Bologna Conference

The Social Dimension – Stocktaking and Future Perspectives of Student Affairs & Services in Europe

July 11-13, 2011
Berlin

Conference Focus & Themes

- Shaping the social dimension – expectations and needs for competitive higher education?
- Stocktaking of student affairs and services in Europe
- Analysis of the social and economic situation of students in Europe
- Country & regional case studies: good practice in student affairs and services
- Impact assessment of student affairs and services for students' success
- Models in student affairs – different approaches around the globe

Come to Berlin and share with colleagues what's happening in higher education in your country! Present what you think are successful models, strong infrastructures, good practice, and current challenges in student housing, catering, counselling and health and child care facilities.

Conference Background

Research – teaching – student affairs and services: These are the pillars of well-performing higher education systems. Excellence in education calls for excellent social infrastructures and support mechanisms for students. The social dimension is a key factor for the success of the European higher education area. Student affairs and services are at the core of the social dimension, but they are organised differently, depending on educational concepts, the structure of universities, and the way the social support of students is organised.

The diverse and complex situation in Europe holds the potential for benchmarking, exchange of good practice, and for mutual learning between student services and affairs professionals, academics, university staff and students.

Expected Results

- Survey of student affairs and services in Europe
- Strategies for the development of the social dimension
- Networking and international exchange in student affairs and services
- Call for programs
- Share of experience and knowledge in student affairs and services
- European standards for quality student affairs and services

